DAWES ACCEPTS NOMINATION

Delivers Address Attacking La Follette Movement.

AGAINST THE WORLD LEAGUE

Republican Nominee for Vice President Accuses the Democratic Party of Straddling the Issue of "Radicalism" and Gives Coolidge and Hughes Credit for Reparations Plan—Essence of His Speech.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Charles G. Dawes received official notification of his selection as the vice presidential nominee on the Republican ticket at his home in Evanston, Ill., last night.

It was an old-fashioned demonstration, with a big parade, many bands and banners and much red fire. The town was buried under a mass of flags, bunting and banners. It was estimated that 50,000 people were assembled on the spacious grounds of the Dawes mansion and adjacent streets. Women from all parts of the country participated under the leadership of Mrs. A. T. Hert of Kentucky, vice chairman of the Republican national committee.

Dawes in his speech held the movement headed by Senator La Follette as the chief opponent of the Republican ticket headed by President Coolidge. The Democratic party, with "one conservative and one radical candidate" on its ticket, he said, hoped to get votes by avoiding the "radical" issue. Dawes upheld the Republican platform declaration against any entrance into the league and assailed the Democratic position as an invitation to again "enter that fog of debate in a public referendum." He commended the proposal of the present administration for adherence to the permanent court of international justice, declaring "it is to our national interests and the interests of the world."

Referring to the La Follette movement, Dawes described it as "a heterogeneous collection of those opposing the existing order of things, the greatest section of which, the Socialists, flies the red flag." He added: "In this situation, for which the American people alone are responsible, the Democratic party, as a party, instead of recruiting itself from the two battle lines, will suffer only the fate which befalls those who try to straddle in a real fight."

Credit for the reparations plan bearing his name, Dawes said, belonged to President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes.

STATE OPENS ARGUMENTS

Death Penalty Demanded in the Leopold-Loeb Case.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—In opening the state's argument in the Leopold-Loeb hearing Assistant State's Attorney Thomas Marshall declared "there is but one penalty proportionate to the turpitude of this crime, and that is the extreme penalty, death." He added: "If this case does not deserve punishment by death, then no case in the history of Illinois has deserved that punishment."

Responsibility, he maintained, was not a matter of degree, but, in the sight of the law, a fixed standard. "A man is either wholly responsible in a legal sense, or he is not responsible at all," he said. "If these defendants knew that they were doing wrong, if they realized that what they were doing would subject them to justice, then they are to be punished according to the law."

Clarence Darrow, chief defense attorney, who will deliver the principal argument for the defense, said he was satisfied with his medical defense and will strive to convince Justice Caverly that the boys were only partly responsible for the killing. He will ask that the boys be spared the gallows and be sentenced to the state penitentiary.

ADMIRAL RODGERS' CLAIM

England Tricked United States in Armament Pact.

Boston, Aug. 20.—Rear Admiral W. L. Rodgers, United States navy, retired, in a statement at the institute of politics at Williamstown, declared that Great Britain dominates the league of nations and the commerce of the world and inspired the Washington conference for limitation of armaments in order to prevent the United States from having sufficiently strong force to protect the American merchant marine, which could compete with that of England. The admiral said:

"Our limitation of armaments treaty of three years ago played into England's hands, and indeed she originated it. She does not wish us to interfere with her, as our national growth might permit us to do. It was the competition of our merchant fleet with that of Great Britain which she hoped indirectly to limit by direct action upon our navy. It is not to be thought that she was contemplating rivalry of the navies as the primary issue."

Davis Hervey, 55, prominent farmer living near Wellsburg, W. Va., was crushed to death when a tractor he was operating overturned on him.

FRENCH TO QUIT GERMAN SOIL

Further Evacuation Expected Within Next Two Weeks.

PROTOCOL TO BE RATIFIED

Details of Proposed Loan to Germany Nearly Completed by the International Bankers—Move to Prevent Dumping of German Products Contemplated by Great Britain and France.

London, Aug. 20.—In government circles here further evacuation of German territory by French troops is expected within the next two weeks. French retirement from the Baden towns of Offenburg and Appenweiler has been completed without disturbance.

Premier MacDonald believes that the continued presence of French and Belgian troops on German territory may prove an obstacle to the complete execution of the Dawes plan. He is informally urging withdrawal before the time limit set in the London agreement. Premier Herriot of France, Premier Theunis of Belgium and Chancellor Marx of Germany returned to their respective capitals, acquainting their governmental colleagues with the details of the London settlement.

The next step is ratification of the protocol and the London pact by the respective parliaments and the enactment of special legislation by the German reichstag. Chancellor Marx, according to Berlin advices, reported to his cabinet that Germany had obtained the best terms possible. The great demonstration given Premier Herriot upon his arrival at Paris convinced British officials that the bulk of French public sentiment favors the Dawes settlement conditions.

The international bankers who will handle the proposed $200,000,000 loan for Germany have nearly completed the details. It is understood further loans will be made later if the Germans prove their sincerity and the revenues from the Dawes plan are up to expectations. Some financial experts estimate that the total loans to Germany within the next five years may reach nearly $1,000,000,000.

The United States has taken precaution against dumping of German products through the high tariff wall Britain and France are proposing similar measures. Germany is expected, therefore, to open new markets in the Orient and in eastern and southern Europe for the logical expansion of its trade.

The first step toward ratification of the pact of London was taken when Premier Herriot's cabinet unanimously approved action of the French delegation at the London conference on application of the Dawes-Young reparations report.

HELD THE RESULT OF SPECULATION

Recent Rise of German Securities Purely Artificial.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS' VIEW

Actual Value of the German Bond Itself Has Not Changed—Skyrocketing of Securities Followed Acceptance of the Dawes Reparations Plan—Amateurs the Principal Speculators, Officials State.

Washington, Aug. 20.—High government officials say the recent skyrocketing of German securities is a result of speculation following the acceptance of the Dawes-Young reparations plan.

Speculators in Germany, on the mere chance that the Dawes plan might possibly in some mysterious way, in the future, make valid the German war bonds, began to invest small amounts. This speculative buying in Germany naturally boosted the price. Inevitably the local market became too dear to be attractive and the foreign market was invaded. Speculators placed orders in America. Soon the usual rumors got around and buying in New York and elsewhere became almost feverish, which further shot up the price.

What had been offered at $5 one day without takers, the next day, because of this speculation, was selling for as much as $1,700. But the value of the actual bond itself had not changed. Its sale price was purely artificial.

The German reich has not said, nor even intimated, nor does the Dawes plan provide, that it would redeem its outstanding obligations for anything more than face value in ordinary marks.

German paper marks will be redeemed in the new German money to be issued at about 1,000,000,000,000 per gold mark, according to present indications. The so-called Dawes plan has for its very foundation the fact that Germany today is virtually free from debt. And this freedom from debt is due entirely to the depreciation of the mark. German marks today are to be had at some 4,000,000,000,000 to the dollar.

Amateurs, principally the same class who bought German marks when they were 100 to the dollar and lost all they invested, are the biggest buyers of this paper. Reputable bankers advise against them and professional speculators as a class are keeping off.

Lives Lost and Damage Done to Property and Crops.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Storms which swept four middle western states claimed several lives and did great damage to property and crops.

Portions of Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and Nebraska were hit by wind, hail, rain and electrical storms. Thousands of acres of farm land throughout Iowa are covered with water. Growing crops were beaten down and in many places completely destroyed. In the cities trees and telegraph poles were blown down, automobiles washed down main thoroughfares and buildings damaged by the wind and hail.

J. N. Schley, 32, and Claude Barrett, 19, were killed by flood waters near Cedar Rapids, Ia., where the storm struck hardest. Schley and Barrett, both farmers, were drowned when they attempted to rescue a herd of cattle.

At Milwaukee thousands of dollars of damage was caused by a storm of cyclone proportions. Traffic was tied up by debris which filled the streets. Trees were uprooted and telegraph poles blown down. Rain and hail accompanied the winds.

James C. B. Beatty of East Liverpool, who unsuccessfully tried to defeat Donahy for Democratic nomination for governor, spent $144.94.

It cost Hamilton G. Dewees $317.25 to be nominated for state treasurer on the Democratic ticket. B. F. Paint Salesman's Joke

A woman complaining to the paint-store man that the floor paint he had sold her would not stick to the floor, while everything that fell on it stuck to the paint, suggested that probably she had opened the can upside down.

How Expression Started

"The greater the crime the higher the gallows," was at one time a practical legal maxim in English common law. In 1638 Patrick McGregor, alias Gilderoy, a notorious robber, was hanged at Edinburgh on a gallows so high that his body "looked like a kite in the clouds." Tradition says the gallows were 30 feet high. The expression "higher than Gilderoy's kite" is an allusion to this famous hanging. It means very high.

End of All Things

The temperature at which water begins to boil is called the boiling point. The boiling point depends on pressure as well as temperature. Water can be made to boil by either raising the temperature or by reducing the pressure. Theoretically, then, if all the atmosphere were removed from the earth the pressure would be zero and the water of the ocean would boil and turn into vapor.

Some Go Even Further

After straining over examination papers for a week, a divinity student entered the pulpit Sunday. After reading the Ten Commandments the confused student added: "Only five of these need be attempted."

INDIAN MAIDENS NOW ELIGIBLE TO MARRY

Oil Men Are After Them to Get Leases to Land.

Waurika, Okla.—Several hundred Indian maidens of the Chickasaw and Choctaw tribes in Oklahoma, who were babes eighteen years ago when allotments were made in these nations, reached their majority, by virtue of an act of congress, on March 4, 1924. Generally the fact had been overlooked in this territory, but an oil man revealed his recollection of it when he began searching for some of these maidens that he might obtain oil leases to their lands.

The number of such maidens appears not to be known outside the agency office at Muskogee. Nor is the residence of many of them generally known. Some are fullbloods and live among their kind in the recesses of Pushmataha and McCurtain counties. A few live with parents, or guardians, on, or near, their allotments.

But wherever they are, they are now competent to get married and make disposition of their lands, some of them subject, of course, to provisions of laws governing fullbloods and mixed bloods. The lands of many are in Jefferson, Carter and Stephens counties, where oil fields exist and wildcaters are seeking to identify new fields. Some of them have been rich from oil incomes for several years.

The making of a common birthday for several hundred Indian children was one of the many curious provisions of law governing these Indians. They were babies when allotments were made, but lands were set aside for them. Congress said the female babes should have their eighteenth birthday on March 4, 1924, and male babes their common majority birthday on March 4, 1927.

An illustration of the forgetfulness of fortune-seeking and adventurous young men of the country is revealed by the fact that the number of June weddings in the Indian country was only normal for the season.

Youngest Exploring Party Leaves for Arctic Trip

Led by a youth of twenty-three and including several under twenty-one, what must surely be the youngest and smallest party of explorers ever got together, left Erith, England, for a trip to the Arctic regions. Little of This Drug Will Go a Long Way

Baltimore, Md.—A drug of such tremendous power that it is used in a ratio of one part to 18,750,000,000 of solution has been produced by Dr. John J. Abel, professor of pharmacology at the medical school of Johns Hopkins university, it is announced.

It is a tartrate compound extracted from the pituitary gland of cattle, and is used in obstetrics and as a specific for diabetes insipidus. One ounce of this tartrate, it is said, would turn all the water in a one-foot pipe line running from New York to San Francisco, into pituitary extract.

The pituitary gland lies in a bony cavity at the base of the brain and controls functions of growth. Its disorders are regarded as the cause of such human abnormalities as those of the circus giants. Doctor Abel is endeavoring to isolate the absolutely pure principle of the pituitary organ so that its effects can be studied with exactness. He was the first to do this, according to the university, in the case of epinephrine (adrenalin), the product of the adrenal glands.

French Reign of Terror

The Reign of Terror was that period of the French revolution beginning with the fall of the Girondists in June, 1793, and lasting until the overthrow of Robespierre, July 27, 1794. During this time the country was under the domination of a faction which carried on wholesale executions regardless of age, sex or position.

Shelter for Travelers

A "dak bungalow" (rarely a house) is a shelter for the accommodation of travelers at a station on a dak route. The Anglo-Indian word "dak" or "dawk" means "a post or transport by relays of men or horses for carrying mails, etc., or passengers in palanquins."

Her Preference.

Any Fabric Good in Proper Place

When Making Purchase Consider Service Which Is Expected.

Almost every fabric is a "fine one." If you find its special function, advises an authority. That means that you can consider no cloth as being of a specific worth, for its value is always relative, dependent on the use to which you intend to put it. Therefore, in buying a piece of goods, you must take into account its particular use.

Consider tartan. Here is a fine, netlike material, admirably adapted to certain purposes for which a coarser material would not be appropriate. Yet tartan is not strong, and does not launder well; so it would be, you see, utterly unfit for articles whose worth depends solely upon durability. The wise shopper, then, does not overlook tartan when she is looking for a loosely constructed cloth for fancy dress costumes and some decorative purposes, but she is content to leave it alone in the province for which its manufacturer designed it, and so she spared the failure awaiting her if she tries to draft it into fields in which it was never intended to serve.

Or take the warm, knitted, wool sweater, so desirable for indoor use and for general wear in damp climates. Even its "warmth" is relative, for well you know that it would be a wrap in name only for a cold, windy ride in the country.

To expect a satin dress to wear well on country trips would be foolish. So in making every purchase the shopper must consider the purpose for which she wants it. One material may give excellent service in an afternoon gown, but it would be a very poor "buy" for traveling or street wear.

It is not necessary always to insist on the "all-wool-and-a-yard-wide" quality of goods for winter clothing, which some women feel obliged to get. Some of the less expensive cotton and wool mixtures are in many cases just what you want for certain purposes. Cloth that has a cotton warp and a wool filling are excellent when, for instance, that cloth is one like mohair or alpaca. Silk, combined with wool, as in silk and wool poplin, may make an excellent and inexpensive cloth. Likewise cotton and silk in a fabric is often stronger than a piece of weighted silk; but if too much cotton is present the fabric will soil and crush more quickly than silk would alone.

No one denies that in some cases cotton is to be preferred to linen, being much like linen in appearance, costing less and yet giving good service. On the other hand, cotton is never so satisfactory for towels, handkerchiefs, or dresser scarfs, for linen absorbs moisture quicker and dries more rapidly; a union of cotton and linen in towels will give better service than all cotton.

A soft-finished, loosely woven silk, like charmeuse or messaline, will not crack or split as quickly as taffetas and other hard-finished silks will. But loosely woven silks are not suitable for gowns of tight-fitting styles, since such silks are likely to slip at the seams.

Medium-Brimmed Hat Is Turned Smack-Up at Back

Those hats that have brims this season—that is, those that have medium brims—invariably have them turned smack-up at the back. The sketch shows one of these models, with its back caught up by a ribbon that first swatches the crown.

Frills Out of Place

Frilly lingerie much beribboned has no place in the modern woman's wardrobe, for well she knows that upon the proper cut and fit of her undergarments depends much of the chic of her frocks. Nothing must be worn that will in any way disturb the slim silhouette of the day. There must be no extra fullness, no ruffles, no bows of ribbon to make clumsy lumps under one's slim little one-piece frocks.

For Town, Country

A sedate sort of plaid is a feature of the new silk hostery. This is worn with walking shoes, not only in the country but also in town. The plaids, which are very small, confine themselves to dim blues, greens and violets, with here and there a brilliant stripe of scarlet, jade or gold.

Change Aspect of Hat

There are many ways of changing the aspect of a sports hat, one of which consists of adding a band of wide black satin ribbon across the front on which large flowers are embroidered on gay wools. The ribbon ties in a bow in the back.

TRACE WHITE INDIANS TO SCOTCH ANCESTRY

New Orleans Folk Have Legend of an Early Settlement in Darien —Tales of Elopement.

New Orleans, La.—The recent discovery of so-called "white Indians" on the isthmus of Panama by the Marsh expedition has unleashed its legend in New Orleans, versed in the romantic lore of Central and South America.

An expedition of Scotsmen, some say, settled in Darien in the autumn of 1606 by authorization of the Scotch parliament. This expedition, numbering some 1,200 persons, included four ministers of the Church of Scotland, who went along to establish a Presbyterian organization, and it is told that because of their ascetic tendencies some of the sturdy Scotch families rebelled against them and were banished from the settlement.

Later, it is said, others of the settlers were driven away by the Spaniards, and it is thought likely many of them fled into the jungles and remained. This, if the supposition is correct, might account for the white Indians.

But the San Blas tribe of Indians have a different story. Many years ago, they say, so long ago that no one can recall the date, a band of white men came to Darien and set about to rob the red men of their wealth. In their exploitations, however, the paleface visitors incurred the displeasure of an evil spirit and soon they died.

Their spirits, so the story goes, being accursed, were driven into the fever-haunted jungles, where they stayed forevermore. That is the legend of the San Blas tribe.

According to their oldest chiefs, no San Blas could intermarry with another race. That law still holds, and so strictly is it observed that even now a white man visiting their villages is carefully watched.

But there are tales of Pocahontases even among the San Blas, and they say that some of the women of the tribe ran away with paleface men, whom they married, only to be slain later or their babies killed a few days after birth.

It is thought improbable by these unofficial historians that the white Indian is of Spanish origin, for the men of Spain were never referred to by the Indians as white men, but as "jinetas," after the Spanish "horseman." This failure of the Indians to refer to the Spaniard as white men while that term was applied to other strangers of the jungles is considered solid ground for the theory of those that believe the new-found tribe descended from the Scotch.

Needle That Wrecked Ed Pays His Board

New York.—Edward McAvoy, eighty, who claims to have been the "discoverer" of John L. Sullivan, world champion pugilist of a generation ago, recently displayed a needle almost two inches long and smiled with satisfaction. The needle which had destroyed the old man's means of livelihood has restored it.

Mr. McAvoy, who lives at the Hotel Navarre, swallowed the needle six years ago while eating a piece of corn bread. Paralysis resulted and the money which Mr. McAvoy had saved for his old age was spent on doctors' bills. Then, a few days ago, Mr. McAvoy felt a pain in his heel and reached down and pulled out the needle which had paralyzed one part of his body after another as it journeyed the length of his 6-foot frame.

Now Mr. McAvoy exhibits the needle to doctors who formerly treated him and were unable to diagnose his case. He charges them the same amount to see the needle which they formerly charged him when they failed to see it.

Legal to Make Wife Live With "In-Laws"

Honolulu.—A woman is not justified in deserting her husband because he compels her to live with his parents, according to a recent decision by the territorial Supreme court.

In an opinion reversing the decision of a lower court, the Supreme court justices held that Kui Yim-Fong, Chinese, was not entitled to a divorce from William Fong on the ground that he failed to support her.

Evidence adduced at the trial indicated that William's wife had deserted him because he could not provide her with a home other than the one he occupied with his parents.

"While the taking of a wife to the home of his parents," the court held, "is perhaps not the best and ideal method of supplying her with a home, it cannot be said, as a matter of law, that that fact alone justified the wife in deserting her husband."

Barter's Wife's $1,000 Art Work for His Funeral Costs

Syracuse, N. Y.—A painting valued at $1,000, entitled "The Shepherdess and the Sheep" is to become the property of a Syracuse undertaker as the result of the death recently of Benjamin C. Frazee, eighty-seven years old, of Baldwinsville, after he had been struck by an automobile in that village.

Two years ago Frazee arranged with the undertaker here that on his death the painting, the work of Mrs. Frazee, now dead, would pay the funeral expenses.

Church Owns Race Track

Perhaps there is only one church in the world which owns a race course. Half a mile from Esher church in the English county of Surrey, is the Sandown race course. The church has owned most of this land for nearly three hundred years, and it derives a big revenue from the race meetings.

He Wasn't Polite

In a recent entrance examination paper one question was: "Explain the difference between a strong verb and a weak verb." A small boy's answer read: "If I say shut the door, it is a strong verb; but if I say please shut the door, it is a weak one."—London Post.

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

MILK PRODUCERS

Enthusiastic Meeting Held in Court House on Tuesday Evening.

One hundred members and ten non-members of the Pickaway County local of the Scioto Valley Cooperative Milk Producer's association enjoyed a very enthusiastic meeting held at the court house Tuesday evening, August 19.

Mr. Smart, president of the Scioto Valley Cooperative Milk Producer's association told of the relationship of the local to the central association. Following Mr. Smart, Mr. E. C. Rector president of the Pickaway County Farm bureau, addressed the members, telling them how the Farm bureau helped to organize the association and what it is doing at the present time to promote the organization. Mr. Rector is in very close touch with the entire Farm bureau movement and is very optimistic in his views of the future for Pickaway county. Mr. E. D. Waid of the dairy marketing department, Ohio Farm Bureau federation with charts and figures gave an outline of the dairy marketing situation in Ohio and what cooperation has done and will do to improve it. Mr. H. L. Andrew, also of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation followed with a definite program for filling in the truck routes and cutting down the gathering expense which will immediately reflect back to the producer in the form of patronage dividends. At the close of the meeting dozens of prospects for members were listed and those present volunteered to personally solicit their nearest neighbors.

Ice cream cones and plenty of them were served when the business was completed. Considering the service being rendered the Pickaway County local is one of the most efficiently operated in the state and from point of volume of butterfat handled, 26,744 pounds in July is second largest.

PRICE OUR FATHERS PAID.

In answer to the objection of the several ministers against the mobilization of our army on September 12, I would like to ask them what they really knew about it. I believe they could better prepare for peace by teaching their congregations along the same lines they were taught while preparing for the ministry, instead of trying to tell a very competent general staff how to run our army, or by obstructing this same staff.

If they believe the world has arrived at the stage for universal disarmament, they are deluding only themselves. If we disarm, what proof have they that the rest of the world will follow suit? If they cared to find out, they would find our war losses always have been large because we were forced into war before we could be prepared.

There are millions of people in these United States who are descended from the early colonists. They know the price their fathers paid that this nation might be free and safe from aggression. If any person thinks that those people will allow our army and navy to become disarmed, let him not be deluded. For no foe, either foreign or domestic, ever shall desecrate the graves of our noble fathers, who were just as good Christians and perhaps longed for peace more than any of our pacifistic friends.

These ministers need not think I am speaking from religious prejudice, because I am a Protestant, as were my ancestors for centuries. The motto of my own family was "Saecula Praeterita in Saecula Ventura" (The generations pass into the coming generations) and I hope our military forces will protect these coming generations, until each man takes the hand of his enemy as a brother and they journey to that joyful land from whose vastness no traveler returns.—Letter in Springfield Union.

STATE FAIR

All is in Readiness for the Big Show All Next Week.

Ohio's capital city is ready for the thousands who will attend the 1924 State fair, opening August 24, and continuing thru August 30. The Columbus chamber of commerce, all civil and commercial organizations, state, county and municipal officials, are prepared to make comfortable and happy the guests from over the state.

City police have been given special instructions to display more than the usual degree of courtesy to visitors during State fair week. Various organizations will "put themselves out" to welcome the visitors.

For accommodation of out-of-town people, the F. & R. Lazarus & Co., Columbus' biggest department store, will establish two information booths during fair week. One will be on the main floor of their downtown store and the second in a commodious tent at the southwest corner of the horticultural building on the fair grounds.

From the tent at the fair grounds, the Lazarus organization will supply much the same information, as well as assist visitors in locating rooms for occupancy during their visit in Columbus. Railroad, traction and bus time tables will be accessible there and tickets will be on sale for grandstand seats for the afternoon races and the evening horse shows in the coliseum.

Downtown Columbus will be in gala attire for State fair week. Local organizations are stressing Columbus day, August 25, and special attention will be given to artistic decoration of stores, windows and electric light standards.

All Help Unfortunate

A singular custom prevails among the Tartars or Kurds. If a man loses his cattle or other property he pours a little brown sugar into a piece of colored cloth, ties it up, and carries one such parcel to each of his friends and acquaintances. In turn he is presented, according to circumstances, with a cow or sheep or a sum of money.

AMUSEMENTS

Booth Tarkington's done it—written an original story for the screen—and for Tom Meighan at that. It's "Pied Piper Malone" which opened at the Met theater last night, a comedy drama with the star in the role of Jack Malone, third mate of the S. S. Langland, Captain Clarke in command. George Fawcett plays the captain. Malone is a regular "Pied Piper" to all the kiddies in town. He is "Uncle Jack" to all.

In this case there's not a girl in every port, only in Oldport, Jack's home town, and that's Patty Thomas, the mayor's daughter. Lois Wilson has this part. Charlie Crosby (Cyril Ring), second officer of the Langland, has always claimed Patty as his girl. There is great rivalry between the two men.

Malone is unjustly accused of the responsibility for the loss of the Langland while under the influence of liquor when on duty. Only his parents, Patty and the children, believe in him. He beats up Charlie Crosby, when he finds him urging Captain Clarke to "have another" on him in Oldport's only blind tiger. He brings Clarke back into the good graces of the community, the latter in turn sets Jack aright with the townfolk. Malone gets another vessel for Clarke and sails himself as first officer. Patty is on the dock to see them off. She will be waiting—for Jack when they return.

TELLS WONDERS OF WIND CAVE

Hay Fever and Asthma Sufferers Find Instant Relief at National Park.

Washington.—Wind Cave, one of the least known of the American national parks, in which sufferers from hay fever and asthma get instant relief, is described in a bulletin of the national park service of the Department of the Interior. The belief that the park was discovered by a farmer while stalking deer in 1881 is made known. The discoverer was attracted by a loud, weird whistling coming from a hole in a rock not more than eight inches in diameter, which was later enlarged by blasting, and now forms the present entrance to the cave.

Several theories are advanced as to the beneficial effect of the cave on hay fever and asthma, one being that it is due to the entire absence of vegetation in the cave and the other that it is because of the remarkably even temperature, which is never below 43 degrees nor above 47 degrees during the year. Still another theory is that there is an unknown ingredient in the air of the cave.

The Wind Cave national park, with an area of 10,522 acres, was created in 1903. Chief interest in Wind Cave lies in the masses of calcite, aragonite and quartz, and in the geodes, stalactites, stalagmites and a peculiar box-work formation. At one point two geodes of large dimensions, which stand side by side, practically touching one another, differ so greatly in structure and content that they are believed to have been created thousands of years apart.

"Pop-Corn" and "Snowballs." The walls and ceilings of the numerous passages and chambers in the cave are covered with formations of a remarkable nature. Describing them in a letter to the national park service, a visitor to the cave wrote:

"The pop-corn formation looks indeed like a lot of well-popped corn fastened to the walls and ceilings of the cave. In places the balls are smaller than peas, in others they are several times as large. The formation is pure white without the brilliancy that makes frostwork dazzle the eye. Akin to the pop-corn effect is the snowball. In various parts of the cave the walls and ceilings look as if boys had been snowballing them with balls just wet enough to stick and spatter.

"The frostwork forms the chief beauty of the cave. It is formed in the softest rock and in the upper parts of the cave. It is suspended or shoots up and out of the limestone in clusters of white tiny needles formed of infinitesimal crystals resembling pine clusters. The coarsest threads are not larger than needles, and they decrease in size until the formation resembles the finest cotton. Some of it, called mineral cotton by the guide, would deceive anyone away from the cave. One section of it, which has been named 'Noah's Beard,' is several feet long and white as snow."

The Wind Cave national park is situated in the Black hills of southwestern Dakota, 12 miles north of Hot Springs. The cave is believed to have served at one time as channels for subterranean waters which now follow other courses. The outlet probably is in the great spring at the upper end of Buffalo Gap, a few miles to the eastward, where the land is about 300 feet lower than the lowest part of the cave yet explored.

The cave illustrates not only the results of the solvent action of water on limestone, but also the redeposition of calcium carbonate of the limestone, forming the stalactites and various deposits on the walls. The boxwork, which is a characteristic feature of Wind Cave, was produced by the water depositing calcium carbonate in small cracks in the limestone of such a character that when the rock crumbled out, thin rectangular walls of the deposit remained.

The water which formed the cavern ages ago came to the surface through cracks which are now mostly covered by the earth washed into them. One of these which remained open led to the discovery of the cave. At times the continuous air current, which gives the cave its name, moves from higher to lower levels and blows out at the entrance openings. At other times the movement is in the contrary direction.

Wind Cave Game Preserve.

The Wind Cave national game preserve was established in the west corner of the park by congress in 1912 to provide a suitable home for a herd of buffalo presented to the government by the American Bison society. This preserve, occupying more than one-third of the park area, was chosen as the one best adapted as a refuge for the various species of big game native to the region.

The location on the southern slope of the Black hills was selected primarily because of its moderate elevation, comparatively mild winters, and abundance of feed. The fact that a famous wintering place of the buffalo was situated near Buffalo Gap added in the choice. The tract is adapted not only for buffalo, but for elk, mule and white-tailed deer, antelope and possibly mountain sheep. The stretches of grazing land in the open groves of yellow pine forest form a picturesque feature of the higher ground in the park, while the timber in the small canyons affords shelter to the game during severe storms.

HARTMAN THEATER

This year's production of the Al. G. Field minstrel show, the 38th annual edition, which opens at the Hartman theater, Columbus, Monday, August 25, and remains through fair week, is the last word in minstrel entertainment. It is easily recognized as the fastest, most appealing and truly characteristic minstrel show on the American stage today. It is presented under the direction of Edward Conard, present manager of the show. Al. G. Field minstrel shows have always stood at the front and this year is no exception, the show is better than ever before.

Jack Richards again heads the cast of singers and minstrel lovers all over the country acclaim him as the most popular minstrel balladist. His role is exceedingly heavy in this production since the public consistently demand to hear more of him. Billy Church, the clear, bell-like tenor, also captivates his audiences. Five clever comedians are in the cast; Nick Hufford, Harry Frankel, Harry Shunk, Johnny Healy and Jack Kennedy and their efforts are easily worthy of the profession. To dance like Billy and Leo Doran is an art and their chorus of dancers is exceptionally nimble and well trained. As a female impersonator, Boni Mack keeps his audience guessing.

The opening scene of the show is on the deck of a pleasure yacht, sailing the seas and you can almost hear the waves lapping the sides of the boat, so real is the atmosphere. The second part changes to Holland and even the tulips danced to the rhythm of the enchanting music. Romance and adventure ran high in the afterpiece, which takes place in Spain. In the finale in a cabaret in Spain, as well as at the opening, the entire company, including the orchestra, is on the stage.

Mail orders are being accepted at any time and seats are selling at the box office. The demand seems to indicate that the Field show will enjoy even greater popularity than it already has. Matinees are on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

HERO'S BURIAL PLACE IS IN CHICAGO PARK

Treasure Spot Holds Grave of David Kennison.

Many of the thousands of visitors to Lincoln park have discovered for themselves near the Wisconsin street entrance a granite boulder set with a bronze tablet designating the spot as approximately the burial place of David Kennison.

It has been seventy-two years since Kennison's death, when, at the age of one hundred fifteen years, three months and seventeen days, he was the last survivor of the Boston "tea party." Now his grave tablet with the inscription, is the only reminder of a life that was picturesque in more ways than one.

Kennison was an early settler in Chicago, as well as a veteran of the Revolutionary war and the War of 1812. He came here in 1845, when he was 100 years old. Since his fighting days he had been crushed by a falling tree and wounded by a cannon ball fired at a military review, and had only a pension of $8 a month to maintain him. Nevertheless he started west looking for thrills and fortune.

For a year or so after coming to the young metropolis on the lake shore, Kennison worked as a day laborer. Then his fame as a "pourer" at the Boston "tea party" having spread, he obtained the post of lecturer at Mooney's museum, 73 West Lake street. Besides introducing Crater's Genuine Virginia minstreels and discussing the wax figures and other strange exhibits, he gave a lecture at each performance on the dumping of tea in Boston harbor.

Kennison was made manager of the museum in 1848 and he announced that to the public in the following manner:

"I have taken the museum in this city, which I was obliged to do in order to get a comfortable living, as my pension is so small it scarcely affords the comforts of life. If I live until the 17th of November, 1848, I shall be 12 years old, and I intend making a donation party on that day at the museum. I have fought in several battles for my country. All I ask of the generous public is to call at the museum on the 17th of November, which is my birthday, and donate to me what they think I deserve."

The aged patriot not only lived to see his donation party, but almost four years beyond then. His death occurred February 24, 1852. The funeral was held from the First Methodist church and the procession was the most imposing military turnout seen in Chicago up to that time. His body was buried in the cemetery that then was situated in the present park. After the cemetery had been moved to the Illinois chapter of the Sons of the Revolution, and the Daughters of the American Revolution marked his grave with the boulder and tablet.—Chicago News.

Lost Mines in Arizona

Of all the legends of buried treasure, the most persistent is the one about the lost gold mines of Arizona. Only the Indians are supposed to possess the secret of this baffling mystery, although the story has been circulated for more than a century.

That there once were mines in the region is indicated by references found in early Spanish diaries and by the tales passed down through several generations of natives who were compelled to dig the ore as slaves of their conquerors. The chief evidence in support of the tradition is the altar of the San Xavier mission, not far from Tucson. It is described as being "inlaid with virgin gold." Mission records show that the precious metal was brought from Canada del Oro where it was mined by Indians under the direction of Spanish priests.

But no trace now exists of the diggings, and the old trail over which the gold is said to have been carried by pack mules disappears abruptly in the sands.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

One Man Army

The interest with which the progress of the Everest expedition is being followed is yet another proof that England is a sporting nation, declares the London Sphere. We all wish it well—and shall continue to follow it the more keenly if its future bulletins are as entertaining as the first sent home from Phari Dzong by Gen. C. G. Bruce. This is a model of readability and includes one little vignette, which throws a felicitous light on militarist human nature: the world over:

At the frontier, on crossing into independent Sikkim, we were met by the guard, a single policeman. When he had finished the necessary official documents: "Right and salute," roared the guard at himself, and duly saluted with the right hand: "Left turn," he bellowed, and turned to the left: "Quick march," he shrieked and straightway took himself off.

Automatic Foghorn

Few people realize the extent to which human life is safeguarded by automatic devices, Popular Mechanics Magazine remarks. Among the latest of these is a foghorn valve, controlled by a few strands of human hair. The hairs are stretched across a wooden frame, and the ends are fastened to a series of sensitive springs. When a fog comes up the hairs become moist and expand. This sets the horn in operation. After the fog is dissipated, the hairs contract and shut off the horn.

Tuberculosis Is Traced by Marks

"Tattoo" Instrument Devised to Expedite Eradication of Dread Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The marking of hogs with a "tattoo" instrument which has been devised in the United States Department of Agriculture, for use in tuberculosis eradication investigations, has in some instances incriminated the "old hen" on the farm as one of the accomplices in the spread of the infection to swine. The tattoo marks placed on the hogs shipped from an area where tuberculosis is prevalent among cattle and poultry maintains the identity of the hogs even after they have gone through the scalding and scraping processes in the packing plants and makes it possible to trace any infection to its source.

Infection Suppressed.

During the period November 6, 1923, to April 2, 1924, a total of 13,264 hogs were shipped from Hillsdale county, Mich., an area in which the infection among cattle had been suppressed to less than one-half of 1 per cent, qualifying the county as a "modified accredited area." Of this number about one-sixth showed slight evidence of tuberculosis. The lesions were so slight, however, that it was necessary to condemn only one carcass entirely; five others, however, were rather seriously affected. The packers paid the premium of ten cents per hundred-weight on these hogs.

Marks Show Origin.

The tattoo marks on the infected carcasses showed them to have come from 30 farms in Hillsdale county. On 22 of the farms no infection was found among the cattle. On 15 farms bovine infection had not appeared since 1921. On the remaining farms no cattle were kept. Going still further into the investigation, tuberculin tests were applied to 15 lots of chickens containing 75 head. Twelve of the 15 lots contained reactors. Tests were also applied to the swine on those farms with the result that 17 and a fraction per cent of swine infection was indicated. This figure checked rather closely to the percentage, 16.8 per cent, as reported through post-mortem inspection by the inspector at the packing plant. In the absence of bovine tuberculosis on the farms where the hogs originated, the tests incriminated tuberculous fowls as the probable source of infection.

The department cautions live stock owners against needless exposure of swine to tuberculous cattle and poultry and urges the eradication of infection in poultry by disposing of the older fowls especially and cleaning and disinfecting the premises.

Best Time for Cutting Sweet Clover for Seed

Sweet clover should be cut when three-fourths of the seed pods have turned dark brown to black. At this time some flowers and many immature pods will be found on the plants, but the field will have a brownish cast. The seeds shatter badly when mature, and for this reason every precaution must be taken to cut at the proper stage and save as much of the shattered seed as possible. Shattering will be reduced by cutting when the plants are damp from dew or rain. The seed crop is usually cut with a self-rake reaper, grain binder, grain header or corn harvester, the two former being most satisfactory. The crop should be stacked unless it is to be threshed within ten or fourteen days.

Keep a Close Watch for Stinking Smut in Wheat

During harvest, and especially at thrashing time, it is well to keep a close watch for stinking smut in wheat. Seed should be used from fields which show the least amount of smut. Badly smutted wheat, however, can be used if it is treated before being planted. This is sometimes more advisable than buying new seed or exchanging seed. The indications to date are that there is little stinking smut in South Dakota.

Ground Soy Bean Hay

Ground soy-bean hay compares almost identically with ground alfalfa hay, but has only about one-third as much protein as oil meal or cottonseed meal, while soy-bean meal (or cake) is equally as rich in protein as either oil meal or cottonseed meal. Several feeding experiments show conclusively that soy-bean meal or cake, that is, the residue after the oil has been removed, gives equally as good results as either oil meal or cottonseed meal.

Alfalfa After Clover

Although a good crop of sweet clover prepares the way for alfalfa it is often hard to get a stand of alfalfa in the fall after the second year's growth has died down, due to the fact that the sweet clover uses up much of the available moisture and food supply. However, no other crop will provide inoculation for alfalfa like the sweet clover does.

Millet Sown After Rye

Millet is very often sown after rye, and the land may be prepared by double disking, followed by a harrowing, after which the millet may be seeded. Millet is not considered a good hay for horses unless it is cut fairly early, and then it should make up not over half the roughage. Mature millet hay is dangerous to feed to horses.

The "Squealer" Who Made Good Just for Nora

By HAROLD CARTER

HOGAN "squealed." There could not be any greater crime in the policeman's decalogue. And nobody had thought it possible of Hogan. He was just the kind of man who would occupy a sergeant's desk some day. And now he had "squealed."

It was at the inquiry about Pat Grady, who had been given the "third degree" in the station house. The other policemen had denied all knowledge of it, but Hogan had corroborated Grady's testimony word for word.

"What did you do it for, Hogan?" they asked him afterward. And Hogan answered that he had never told a lie and was not going to begin.

That was the beginning of the boycott. Hogan could never be sure, when he went to his cot in the station house, that he would not wake to find himself on the floor, with the bed legs sawed through. Or that his locker would not have been broken into. Or that his uniform would not be a mass of tattered rags. Or something worse.

He meant to stick it out for Nora's sake. Nora was to arrive from Ireland the following month, and they were to be married at once.

Tap-tap-tap-tap! It was the sound of James' nightstick upon the sidewalk. There is no mistaking that sound, and the signal is never given except in desperate emergency.

Hogan spun around and began running along the avenue toward his fellow patrolman. At the further end was a gathering mob of men.

"What is it?" he bellowed. "Man murdered his wife! Crazed with dope!" he heard somebody say.

Upon the bottom step James lay. There was a bullet wound somewhere in his body, and he was drenched with blood. And at the top stood the drug-crazed madman, shouting defiance to all who dared try to take him.

Hogan did not pause "just an instant." That is not the way of the police. Up the stairs he ran, three at a time, and as he reached the middle of the flight he felt an odd twinge in his leg and heard the crack of the revolver. Another bullet spun past his shoulder. A third struck the wall, and again Hogan felt that sudden twinge—in his right arm this time. The night-stick dropped from his hand—and he caught it in his left.

Another bound and he was upon the madman, who was fighting like a fury. He swung the empty revolver down upon Hogan's head with a thud that felled the patrolman to the floor. Then, with a yell, the maniac had darted up the stairs.

Hogan looked down. He saw the frightened mob around the door. He tried to rise, but his limbs failed him. A yell broke from a thousand throats below. "He's fired the house!"

A thin wisp of smoke crept down the stairs. Then a fiery tongue began to lick the wall above him, and Hogan could hear the madman yelling as he watched the conflagration. Below him he saw James huddled up at the foot of the stairs.

He never knew how he reached the upper floor. But when he got there the madman was too busy to notice him, for he was standing over a woman's body and chuckling as he watched the spreading flames. With his last reserve of strength Hogan leaped at the man and brought the night-stick down upon his head. He fell like a stricken ox.

Hogan picked up the body of the woman and staggered down the stairs with her. He saw that she was still living.

A roar of cheering greeted him as he carried the woman to the street.

Up, up he went, through drifting clouds of smoke and scorching fire. Now he was on the upper floor and had picked up the body of the drug-crazed man. He swung him in his arms, but the weight was too heavy and Hogan pulled him down the stairs after him, wrapped in his own tunic.

He laid the body on the sidewalk just as an ambulance came hurrying up. A surgeon leaped from the vehicle.

"Will he live?" asked Hogan.

"He's dead," the surgeon answered, giving the body a cursory survey.

Hogan almost swore—only he remembered that he was a policeman.

"Not him," he said, and pointed to the body of his friend.

"Oh, I beg pardon," said the surgeon. "Yes, it's only a flesh wound. He's coming to now. Why, what's this on your coat?"

"Never mind me," gasped Hogan and fell into the surgeon's arms.

And it was odd, but the first thought that came into his mind after that was the fear that somebody had sawed through the legs of his bed.

The man at his bedside must have understood, for he stretched out his hand and took Hogan's in his.

"Glory be, my lad, you're coming to," he said. "No, there won't be any more bed-sawing, Hogan. Say, lad, you've got to get well as quick as you can because the boys are waiting to give you another sort of reception at the station house."

The Greatest Show Ohio Has Ever Seen!

Outshining all other fairs in the seventy-four years the State Fair has been in existence, the 1924 Ohio State Fair will be the greatest show ever staged in Ohio.

Lasting seven full days, replete with the finest exhibits and the most elaborate entertainment program ever undertaken, it will be a gigantic pageant of all that Ohio stands for.

A SEVEN DAY PROGRAM

For the first time in history, a seven-day program has been arranged. Opening Sunday, August 24, with religious services and appropriate music, the State Fair will continue through the week to the night of Saturday, August 30.

An extensive building program has not only put the grounds in best condition, but has made possible the largest showing of live stock, hogs, poultry and sheep on record. Among the new facilities is the mammoth new Cattle Barn, the finest exhibition building in the country. New features in the domestic departments, improved facilities for Grange and Club work, and finer preparations for machinery, tractor, and other shows, complete a field of exhibits never before approached.

The entertainment program has never been finer. Six days of fast horse racing and a day of automobile events provide a perfect speed program. Band concerts, hippodrome acts and other special features provide an unending flood of amusement. The evening Horse Show, always a favorite, is bigger and better, while the evening pageant, "Queen of Fashion," is the most elaborate ever undertaken for any State Fair.

Make the State Fair a Seven-Day Holiday!

This great exposition is too gigantic in size to be thoroughly reviewed in a single day. Plan now to make a seven-day event of State Fair week and enjoy all of the multitude of attractions prepared for you. It is your Fair, arranged and carried out at great expense and after months of labor. Do not miss it!

FIND DOUGLAS FIR IS SOURCE OF SUGAR

British Columbia Indian Made High Quality Sweet.

Vancouver, B. C.—Recent exhaustive investigations by Prof. John Davidson, botanist of the University of British Columbia, have revealed that long before the coming of the white man to Canada the Indians of British Columbia made a white sugar of high quality which they derived from the Douglas fir of that territory. This source of sugar supply seems to have escaped entirely the attention of white traders, explorers, surveyors, missionaries and other pioneers, and remains today an untapped and unutilized resource. Professor Davidson's investigations of this subject are described in an article by Francis Dickie, of Heriot Bay, B. C.

This sugar appears in white masses of different sizes, ranging from a quarter of an inch to two inches in diameter. The smaller masses form like white drops at tips of the single leaves of the fir and also at times several of the leaf tips are imbedded in a larger drop.

Masses of greater size scatter over the leaves and branches. When placed in the mouth the sugar is found to be exceedingly sweet, with a flavor comparable to the highest class of the manufactured article. For a moment it passes into a pasty consistency, but quickly becomes entirely soluble.

The investigation proved that this sugar is the result of natural exudation from the tips of the needles of the fir. It crystallizes in some instances, cementing the twigs and leaves together, but a slight rain quickly dissolves it from the branches and it is to be found recrystallized at the base of the tree.

Exposure to sun and a long succession of sunshiny days are necessary to produce the sugar and it is not generally found where the fir stand densely, so that a regular harvest of any size could not be depended upon. The deposits are, nevertheless, of considerable value.

While the fir sugar will never play a part as a food supply like the product of the cane and the beet, the manna from the Douglas fir contains about 50 per cent of a sugar known as melezitose, which in small quantities is selling at $66 a pound.

Viennese Count Exiled

After Gaming Trouble

Vienna.—Aristocratic Vienna has been split into two camps as the outcome of the expulsion of Count Adalbert Sternberg from Austria by the police, at the request of Count Herbert Herberstein, controller of the household of the former Archduke Friedrich.

Accusations growing out of a game of cards at the Jockey club led to Herberstein, as president of the club, ordering Sternberg's expulsion. Sternberg subsequently slapped Herberstein's face in a crowded street.

Herberstein, declaring it was beneath his dignity to cross swords with a man like Sternberg, or to appeal to the law against him, moved the police to expel him from the country and Sternberg was in Czechoslovakia within twelve hours.

The Neue Freie Presse, in a leading article, reminds its readers that Sternberg is a scion of the oldest noble house in Austria, which had figured in the country's history since the Thirteenth century.

Women in Prison

Never Try to Escape

Vienna.—Conducting a penitentiary without guards whence no prisoner has ever escaped, is the record claimed for the Wiener-Neudorf prison near Vienna where more than 300 women are serving terms of from one year to life. The honor system is employed, the penitentiary being in charge of about forty sisters of charity under leadership of a supervising director who does not even live on the grounds.

The women do all their own work, attending the heating apparatus, laundry, gardens, bakery, kitchen, and look after the live stock and poultry which keeps the penitentiary supplied with milk, fresh meat and other produce. The prison has become almost self-supporting, and is known as the model penitentiary of all Europe.

Mails Now Go Weekly Into Remote Alaska

Anchorage, Alaska.—Residents along Yukon river are receiving a weekly mail service for the first time since 1898, during the great gold rush of the Yukon. The Alaska railroad has made this possible.

A train leaves Seward, on the gulf of Alaska of the Pacific ocean, and winds its way to Nenana, 400 miles north in the interior. At Nenana the mail is transferred to government steamers which run on a weekly schedule down the Tanana river to Fort Gibbon, on the Yukon river. From there the boats ply the Yukon to Holy Cross, 400 miles from the river's mouth.

From Holy Cross the Northern Commercial company operates a fleet of launches to Nome and St. Michael on the Bering sea coast, and Inoko and Iditarod on the Innoko and Iditarod rivers in the interior.

Sky-blue flannel is piped with white to make up this fascinating one-piece dress that should appeal to many young women.

Arms Are Heavy With Slave Link Bracelets

Links grip women fast in hand. At all fashionable gatherings, whether afternoon or evening, wrists are fairly weighted down with slave link bracelets. Nor is it on one hand only; but on both. The larger the link the smarter the bracelet, says the Dry Goods Economist. The newest chains are composed of three huge links only, which fit tight over the wrist. Unlike other arm adornments, they should not slip higher. Besides white and yellow gold, these bracelets use jade, coral, carnelian and onyx alternately with the metal link.

Intermingled with these are tiny chains, dangling every kind of amulet and charm, but usually those of the mah-jongg order, as China has a decided vogue this season. Overshadowed by links, but sparkling through them, are sapphires, rubies, emeralds—as many as one can afford. If real stones are not within one's reach, imitations replace them. This is a season of arm bands, and the smartest people stoop to good imitations.

In necklaces, silver beads and smoked pearls are particularly new. If one is daring enough, wear one white pearl earring and the other smoked.

Combined Printed and Plain Fabrics Favored

That a straight line is the shortest distance between two points was proved by Euclid, in 300 B. C. That the shortest cut to social success for a sports frock in 1924 A. D. is to combine printed and plain materials, especially when the skirt is sand-tinted crepe and the blouse, piquantly-colored cinderella silk, is demonstrated to everyone's satisfaction, by the successful model whose swag and even slightly boastful air is justified by the admiration it receives on its promenade. Still following in the mathematician's footsteps, geometrical patterns in vivid colorings are much liked this season. The coloring is in bright shades of orange, blue and rose, with a touch of the black which is never absent, either in design or background, from the fashionable silks. Such a costume is equally at home on the courts, the links, or the beach, for it is as comfortable as it is smart. The low collar, the roomy sleeves, the ample pockets, are all built for speed, as one might say, as well as style. The skirt, of one of the new silk and gloss novelty satins, is much in the mode, with its deep inverted plait allowing for a firm "stance."

Another Use for Large Colored Silk Kerchiefs

If you have one of the large, colored silk handkerchiefs that were used so much recently, put it to a new use. Slit it from one corner diagonally across to within one inch of the opposite corner. Make a frock or blouse that has a low "V" neck opening. Sew each cut side of the handkerchief to the neck of the frock. This forms a very graceful jabot trimming, one of the latest whims of Dame Fashion. If you do not possess one of these scarfs get a 12 or 14-inch square of vividly-printed silk. Have it hemstitched around all four sides. Cut through the hemstitching to make a picot edge. Use this square in the same way as you would the handkerchief. It is very smart to have your hat trimmed with the same material as your frock or to have it match a scarf worn with the hat.

Pretty Summer Frock

One may be as gay as one likes this summer and wear the most brilliant color schemes. A very simple and effective frock is made of Roman-striped silk. On the waist the stripes run cross-wise, while the skirt shows them running up and down. There are tiny set-in sleeves and a flat bow with long ends is attached to the bateau neckline in the center of the front, the ends hanging to the bottom of the skirt.

HELD FOR RANSOM

American Business Man Seized by Mexican Bandits.

Mexico City, Aug. 20.—According to advices received by the American embassy here, the American manager of the Crock & Lardi Lumber company, in the state of Durango, has been captured by Mexican bandits and is being held for ransom. The manager's name is Berrinean. Announcement of the capture of the American was received from the United States consul at Durango, the capital of Durango. Details of the capture or the amount of ransom asked are lacking. Counselor Schoenfeld of the American embassy has appealed to the foreign office requesting full information on the case.

Killed at Crossing.

Wellington, O., Aug. 20.—Harley R. Jones, 22, of Columbus, dairy expert, was killed when the auto in which he was riding was struck at a crossing by a Big Four passenger train here. Jones' neck was broken and the auto completely demolished. The train is said to have been traveling at a high rate of speed.
